FROM WORDS TO ACTION

Credit must be given to David Wilson, a delegate to the United Nations Assembly from New Zealand, for engaging in some plain speaking at the right moment.

Mr. Wilson made his refreshing remarks after the economic and finance committee had spent five hours in debate over adoption of its agenda and still could not reach agreement upon what it was to discuss. A Russian objection to one of the items originally scheduled had precipitated so many proposals and complicated the atmosphere to such an extent that practically everyone was in a fog.

At this point, Mr. Wilson said: "If they (the delegates) don't know what it's all about after five hours, I suggest it's about time we all go back to our countries and ask them to send somebody a little more intelligent."

That did the trick. The committee immediately voted 24 to 19 to adopt the agenda as originally proposed, and went to work on it.

Mr. Wilson not only saved time for the committee members, but he gave the millions of people in the world who have been following the UN sessions the satisfaction of knowing that common sense still can find its way into the most complicated discussions.

Men like Mr. Wilson can prevent the United Nations from turning into a Tower of Babel.

THE PEOPLE'S FAULT

It is daily becoming evident in reports from Washington that the nation is face to face with another of those emergencies which John L. Lewis, all by himself, manages to create in this country. Already, in fact, several thousand miners have left their work—an ominous sign of evil things to come in case there is no agreement between the government and Mr. Lewis.

Why the nation has to submit to this kind of holdup every few months can be explained only in the fact that the laws as now written give all labor leaders, including Mr. Lewis, authority which the people never intended them to possess and which is being exercised to the detriment of the national welfare.

Until those laws are revised and the country recaptures the sovereignty it has surrendered to a small minority of its citizens, there is nothing for the long-suffering public to do except to hope that this or that union will be generous enough to let the population have coal to heat its homes and operate its factories, food to eat, and trains to take it where it wants to go.

It is an intolerable situation the nation has permitted the politicians to impose upon it through the medium of the Wagner Act, and one of the first tasks of the next Congress should be a concerted campaign to revise this law in the direction of restoring the balance of power between employers and employees. If this is not done, Congress and the people will be to blame for strikes by which a few men can tie up the nation and inflict suffering on all the people.

POLITICAL ARMISTICE

Then there is the matter of investigations. While there is no indication that the Republicans are going to spend all their energies on probes, some are inevitable. These are almost certain to catch up with political friends of the President. The Republicans have no intention of being put into a position where they might have to "pull their punches" in such cases.

The Republican plans to curb labor lawlessness, and to make unions financially responsible for their activities, are another matter bound to squeeze the President. He has associated himself with the very group which is most certain to complain.

But the embarrassments of this sort, where working cooperatively with the Republicans would put the President in the unhappy position of turning against his friends or associates, are not the worst of the President's problems.

He might be able to surmount these, especially if he were willing to dismiss politics from his mind—even to the extent of withdrawing as a candidate to succeed himself.

What he cannot escape is the squeeze in his own party. He is caught on the one hand between the "Southern" Democrats, who are far nearer to the Republican position on most public questions than to that of the President; and on the other, the radical wing, spearheaded by Henry Wallace and the CIO bosses. As a matter of personal ambition, his one chance is obvious—to "tag along" with the radicals, do what he can for them in crippling the Republican program, and assume that at the next convention the conservative wing will accept him as their only hope of keeping the party united.

This is a sort of a hundred to one shot. It would require him to break faith with the Republicans on his own offer of a truce—to walk a tight-rope of pretense of "cooperation" while really fighting it tooth and nail. It would require him also to keep on good terms with the old-line Democrats while defeating the program they seek.

It is the sort of policy which may sound attractive in theory, but would encounter too many traps in practice ever to really work.

The Republican vote was too large, and the majorities in Congress too decisive, to make the Republicans willing to submit to "slow-balling" on the part of the President. Congress has vast powers short of impeachment to make life miserable for a President whom they believe guilty of double-dealing with them.

On the other hand, for the President really to co-operate, and sincerely try to help the Republicans carry out their program, would call for him doing something which the radicals would promptly call "breaking faith with President Roosevelt."

They would never forgive him. The fact that he would return thereby to the good graces of the Southern Democrats would not specially help him or his party. It would merely make much more hopeless the split in the Democratic ranks, and encourage a Third Party movement—a step which, once taken, probably would cripple the Democratic hopes forever.

The Great Game of Politics

Does leave Mr. Truman? If he looks at them fairly, he knows very well. Unless he deliberately deludes himself, he must know that, though he may be nominated, he cannot be elected President in 1948. He must know that it would be a political miracle if any Democrat won in that year—and political miracles do not occur. His party seems on its way to an inevitable defeat and there is just no sense pretending otherwise. Perhaps that is brutal, but truth often is brutal, and that is the truth. If Mr. Truman is at all clearheaded he knows all this very well indeed.

"But," he may say to himself, "though the party is doomed and the Republicans now have control of Congress, I did not have control anyhow—and though there is no chance of my being elected in 1948—still I am going to be President for two years and two months more. What about that?" Right there is the Truman opportunity. Right there, as they say in certain games of chance, he has "a beautiful play if he sees it." For, if he has the will, he can give the country its first President almost since the days of Washington, who in the last two years of his service was completely devoid of all political ambition and, thus, free from all personal or party necessity to consider any issue or incident except upon its merits.

WHAT is the sense of his doing anything else? Here he is a beaten man without political hope for the future. Here is his party smashed and divided organization which, obviously, will find itself unable to unite in 1948. And here he is with 26 more months in the White House. A personally courageous man, how will the clearheaded Mr. Truman react to this knowledge? Why will he not say to himself this "I did not make it's mess, I inherited it. The defeat of the party was overdue. It would have occurred long ago but for the war. Probably we deserved defeat. In the Senate I followed the leader, but I was never a New Dealer at heart. When death put me in the presidency there was nothing for me to do save eulogize my predecessor and declare my devotion to his policies. The recent election repudiated these policies, repudiated me, repudiated the direction in which we had been going. And here I am with 26 more months in the White House."

CONSIDERING that situation, is there any sensible thing for Mr. Truman to do except take those 26 months and be honest with the American people as no President in the memory of living men has been able to do? He can—he is the will—the only President utterly free of parties, policies, organized minorities and pressure groups. With nothing to lose, he has a lot to gain. It would, to be sure, involve co-operation with the Republicans, but that is inevitable anyhow. And, if once he drives home the idea that for 26 months he is going to be wholly independent—permitting no action, appointment, speech, message or deed to be even remotely influenced by politics or politicians, that his only interest is the public interest and that he has no hidden motive or concealed purpose—once that is driven home he will gain a stature far greater than he has now, had before or

WHY A SOAP SHORTAGE?

You've Heard Rumors. Here Are the Facts!

1. There is a world-wide shortage of animal fats and of vegetable oils. This shortage affects all of us. For instance, this year soapmakers have been able to obtain only one fifth of the imported oils they used in 1941—far less domestic fats, too.
2. Because of the world-wide shortage, manufacturers are unable to get the amount of fats and oils they need to make not only soaps, but also paints, textiles, tires, leather goods, floor coverings, electrical appliances, etc.
3. In the face of these conditions, American soap manufacturers have done their utmost. They have turned all the fats and oils they have been able to obtain into soap just as quickly as possible.
4. But for the help of American housewives, the shortage of soap would have been far more serious. Last year, more than one out of every nine packages of soap sold was made from used fats saved in America's kitchens.
5. Don't blame your grocer. He is doing his best, like the soapmakers, to get more soap for you. Won't you do your best by saving and turning in every drop of used fats.

What's Wrong with this House?

Answer:

That crazy little door, of course! Perhaps that's not enough to discourage buyers today, but that's the same kind of trouble that many people really do have with their electric service! Entrance facilities for electricity are too small in most cases—and homes cannot get enough electricity to run electric appliances efficiently. If you plan to build or remodel—plan, too, to include modern wiring that will accommodate all your demands for modern Electric Living. Don't starve your electric appliances!

Assemblyman Addresses Republican Women Here

The Hon. Thomas B. Stockham addressed members of Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women last evening in the Travel Club home, giving a historical talk on the national, state and county picture in general.

Speaking of the "misconception of wealth," Representative Stockham mentioned that "People think usually of wealth in terms of money. Money is not wealth. . . Labor is the wealth of the country today. Production makes wealth." Continuing, Mr. Stockham considered the recent election, and stated "The people have again taken government back into their own hands by upholding the Republican form of government."

The presiding officer was Mrs. Minerva Epstein, president of the council. Group singing of "America" was accompanied by pianist Mrs. Jeanette Lynch, with the flute salute following. Mrs. Epstein, after a welcome to the gathering, called upon Mrs. Johnston Macauley for minutes of the last meeting. In her opening remarks, the president said in regard to the recent election: "The Republican women did not lose faith, and therefore we have had a victory over Communism."

Mrs. Minot J. Hill gave the treasurer's report. Committees for the year were named.

An old-fashioned Christmas party is arranged for the December meeting. Members plan to send cigarettes to men at Valley Forge Hospital, Phoenixville.

ROTOTILLER IN OPERATION

The new Rototiller farm machine, produced by Graham-Paige Motors in the giant Willow Run plant, prepares soil for planting in a single operation, making unnecessary the three operations of plow, disk and harrow. The five-horsepower tillage unit, which churns and crumbles the soil to a depth of nine inches, has attachments which adapt it to a score of other farm tasks, such as bulldozing, seeding, mowing, snowplowing and other operations.
